The other a bright sorrel, about 14 hands high, a short made horse, has a hanging main and switch tail, a white spot upon his back, occasioned by the saddle, trots hard, and drags his hind feet, by which they are much worn, holds his head high when mounted, has had the glanders for some time, but is almost well; he was shod before, but had lost one of his shoes.

Alexandria, 12th Sept. 1801. d

Leghorn, July 17.—Different reports, poſterior to thoſe which reached us on the 14th and 15th of this month, confirm the news of the debarkation effected by adm. Gantheaume.

The news from Porto Ferrajo are not of ſo favourable a deſcription. This little place continues to make a moſt obſtinate reſiſtance; its inhabitants, or rather multitude of people from different nations who are incorporated with them, keep the place in a moſt deplorable ſituation, and refuſe every offer of accommodation made to them. So far, indeed, do they carry this, that they would not even liſten to a Tuſcan courier, who was ſent with a requeſt to them to ſurrender and enjoy the bleſſings of peace.

On the 14th, the French bombarded the place very briſkly, and according to report endeavoured to take it by ſtorm, they failed in their object, the batteries of the beſieged having conſiderably damaged their redoubts and entrenchments.

Ratiſbon, July 25. In ſpite of the obſcurity in which State affairs are involved, and the ſpeculations with which curioſity ſupplies itſelf, we begin to believe that the Grand Duke will not be indemnified in Italy. His poſſeſſions in Germany are juſt on the eve of being allotted to him, and it is ſaid that they will conſiſt of the following ſtates: Paſſau L'In-viertel, Freiſengen, and Saltzburg. The Archbiſhop of Saltzburg has written from Vienna, that his lot will be decided in a few days. He has farther required that the reſt of his moveable effects may be kept in a ſtate of readineſs to be ſent to him, while he has requeſted the payment of two hundred thouſand florins, which h had advanced to the univerſity of Saltzburg. But the documents we are enabled to collect from this conduct of the Archbiſhop, would afford us very inconſiderable light, unleſs we had at the ſame time certain intelligence that the French Government, which poſſeſſes at once the wiſh and the power of the enforcing the ſtrict execution of the Treaty of Luneville, has declared that it has nothing farther to do in the affairs of the late Grand Duke of Tuſcany, and that he will receive his indemnities in Germany agreeable to the ſtipulations of that treaty. This declaration, which to diſintereſted men ſeems perfectly clear, has not appeared in this light to the miniſters of the eccleſiaſtical princes, who are guided by the notions of ancient diplomatic conduct, the principal art of which conſiſted in never acting in conformity to one's profeſſions. They will never be undeceived till the laſt moment, when the thunder ſhall deſcend on their palaces.

BREST, July 30.

However unfortunate may be the capture of the corvette La Chevrette, which the Britiſh with their boats have carried off from Camaret at midnight, the noble reſiſtance of thoſe who were on board her is not the leſs honorable. Surpriſed without arms, ſurrounded and ſtruck at the ſame moment, they defended themſelves with truly French bravery. Three times the Britiſh were repulſed, and it is proved by accounts of the wounded, that each time they were ſeverely treated, although there were only a handful of men to fight againſt them. The weak crew of the ſhip did wonders. Capt. Chaſſerian did not fall until after he had killed or wounded ſeveral Britiſh. The captain of the troops is not leſs diſtinguiſhed; he is at the hoſpital; his wounds are numerous, but not conſidered dangerous. The officer who commanded the garriſon has been killed. The Britiſh have ſent in here a flag of truce with the wounded French, to the number of forty men. It was a melancholy ſight to behold theſe unfortunate men mutilated and covered with wounds, which proved too evidently that the Britiſh did not owe this capture to the cowardice of the French, but to the ſtratagem which they employed. Taking advantage of the darkeſt moment of the night, they approached in ſilence, and when they came cloſe to the corvette they ſuddenly boarded her. This was not difficult, as three-fourths of the crew were aſleep at the time, and even thoſe on deck were without arms.—The oars of the Britiſh were covered with ſheep-ſkins to deaden their ſtrokes. The Britiſh who were in their ſhirts, had to diſtinguiſh them a black band round the arm. It is ſaid, that notwithſtanding this precaution, they engaged each other. It is certain that their loſs is much more conſiderable than ours.

Alexandria Advertiser.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 30.

"Write, Write, why the devil don't you write, Mr. Editor!" What's the matter? "Matter; why don't you ſee? The Jacobins are in power; they turn all the Federaliſts out of office—all the old faithful ſervants are diſmiſſed—and a parcel of unfledged boys are put into office! Why the government is turned topſy turvy. We are all ruined! undone! Write, I ſay; write down the upſtarts—convince the people of their folly—tell 'em to change their opinions—change the officers of government—reſtore us to order—and all that!"—But my dear ſir, be quiet. Don't urge a man to write, when he has nothing to write about—A man is in a diſmal hobble, who muſt write every day, whether he has a ſubject or not! "A ſubject! Why if he has no other ſubject let him rail—and roar—and bellow—as ſome of the printers do, on both ſides of the houſe—and when they have no ſenſe to print, fill columns with hard names, and nonſenſe."

Federaliſts; Ariſtocrats; Monarchymen; Tories; Jacobins: Democrats; Bankrupts; Raſcals; Scoundrels!

"Aye, that's right—I like that ſort of ſtyle—it is juſt to the point! Write 'em down—the devil is in't, if you cant write theſe fellows down."

Now, look ye, my good ſir; do not fret yourſelf. You have choſen a republican government; you ſay it is the beſt ſort of government. Yet you ſay, the principal offices of government have got into the hands of boys or ſcoundrels. Surely that is not a very good government, which puts the moſt important buſineſs into the hands of the worſt or weakeſt men. But how will you help it? Suffrage, that ineſtimable privilege, the right of ſuffrage, is the property of the Sovereign people. To get power, you muſt go to the ſource. If you want offices, you muſt apply to thoſe who have them to beſtow. How do the Jacobins ſucceed? They write.—True, and they write lies! but one lie, when it has taken hold of the mind, is more than a match for ten contradictions. This however, is not the principal inſtrument of their ſucceſs. No, they go to the ſovereign people; ſit down in their work-ſhops, or by their fire ſides; talk with them; flatter them; praiſe them; excite ſuſpicions againſt men in office; promiſe eternal fidelity, like lovers; tell them their taxes will be leſſened, if they will juſt change the officers of government; in ſhort, make them feel their conſequence; and a little money, here and there judiciouſly diſtributed, may have its effect; as to morality; why, the end juſtifies the means!

Pray, how would you court a lady? certainly you would not write to her only; eſpecially, you would not addreſs her with reaſon? What kind of figure would you make, with your arguments, logic, and the reaſonableneſs of the propoſed connection? If I know any thing about courting, the Jacobins underſtand it the beſt. The federaliſt, like a good honeſt countryman, approaches the ſovereign people, his miſtreſs, with a manly air, and ſays, "Madam, you ſee I am a plain, honeſt man, who will make you a good huſband, play you no tricks, and take good care of your property and children." The Jacobin, puts on his dancing ſchool airs, and as he approaches, ſmiles, ſqueezes the hand, and preſſes the lady to his boſom, and with tender careſſes, flatters, ſighs and liſps the ſoothing tale. Now, my friend, which of theſe will bear away the prize?

As to writing and reaſoning againſt a tide of evil paſſions, of what avail? A Hamilton writes and ſpeaks with energy, and eloquence: a Burr neither writes nor ſpeaks a ſyllable in public; and who ſucceeds? When, my friend, will men, ceaſe to preach to the winds and roaring waves? When will they ceaſe to compliment that vile ferocious animal, man, with the ſtale honor of being governed by reaſon.

But parties muſt have their papers; and they muſt be well ſupported! How does this operate? Why to convey opinions to one ſide only. If the Federaliſts want to diffuſe truth among their opponents, they muſt do it through the democratic papers. In the federal papers, arguments and facts go where they are leaſt wanted. And this is more certainly the fact when a paper is eſtabliſhed for the avowed purpoſe of ſupporting a party; for in that caſe, it is ſure not to get into the hands of the other party.

Yet there are times, when newſpapers and pamphlets are of excellent uſe. There are real occaſions and ſubjects; and when they occur, WRITE with decency and with candor. But an inceſſant jingle of harſh names, falſe accuſations, and undue partialities for a foreign nation, in ſome even of the Federal papers and pamphlets, have done ten times more harm than good—"Remedio irratur ſeditio," ſays the Roman hiſtorian—the remedy aggravates the inflammation.

Newſpapers would have double the effect in counteracting the evil deſigns of bad men, if they were not eſtabliſhed for party purpoſes, and only uſed occaſionally for the propagating of truth on controverted ſubjects. They are, however, valuable weapons in the hands of good men, and tend, in a degree, to counteract the miſchief done by ſimilar weapons in the hands of factious men. At the ſame time one half their value is loſt by an intemperate uſe; men often write as well as govern too much. No man likes to be fed daily on the ſame diſh. New-York pap.

☞ THE Officers of the 106th Regiment are hereby notified to attend the training on Thurſday next, at the Court-Houſe, at 10 o'clock, agreeable to the orders heretofore given.

Red Straw Wheat.

The ſubſcriber having experienced conſiderable difficulty in arranging the price of this wheat, from the variety of the prices in the market, has determined to fix the value at TWO DOLLARS per buſhel, being the price at which wheat ſold when this was firſt advertiſed. Gentlemen may be ſupplied in any quantity, and at any time, by applying at this place.

It may not be improper to mention that this wheat ripens nearly as ſoon as the early wheat, which is ſo celebrated, and was cut almoſt at the ſame time during the laſt harveſt—That it reſiſts the Fly can be proved by the moſt reſpectable characters in this neighborhood, who have had a fair trial——No wheat has ever produced ſo much upon this eſtate as the red ſtraw, which was ſown in the pooreſt part; indeed, in that conſiſts its excellence, as any grain will be luxuriant in a rich ſoil.

Veſſels ſent for this wheat can be furniſhed without the leaſt delay.
